The two men decided of their own free will to participate in their wedding event no one compelled them to do so. The florist has sold flowers to homosexual and has employed them. Her only "crime" was to choose not to participate in the same event. Apparently the state of Washington agrees that homosexuals have freedom of choice but Christians do not. They have at once created a protected class and a subjugated class. Homosexuals can force businesses to meet any demand they place on it and Christians obviously have no right to make any decisions based on their faith. I support laws that protect consumers from being discriminated against but this is crossing the line. Compelling someone to participate in an event against their will is unconstitutional.

Any business has the right to serve, or not serve anyone, for any reason. If this florist chooses not to provide flowers for a gay marriage or any other marriage for that matter, that florist can legally do this and is not breaking any laws of discrimination. Discrimination laws state that you may not discriminate based on color, sex, religion and sexual orientation in hiring practices, housing (sell/rent), medical care, sitting down on a bus, etc. etc. Now, if the florist chosen not to HIRE a gay person as an employee, then yes, that would be against discrimination laws. I am a small business owner – sole proprietor (I sell parking lot lighting) and I have had a couple of potential customers wishing to purchase lighting fixtures and poles from me, that I have declined to work with. Not because of the color (have never seen them), not because of their religion (have no idea), but because one had a credit rating that sucked, and the other on, through my gut instinct and the words he said ("####") to me labeled him immediately as a bigot. Did I break any discrimination laws by choosing not to deal with them? No. You have all seen the signs at businesses that say "no shirt, no shoes, no service" haven't you? Well where is the ACLU claiming that these businesses are discriminating against naked people (at least from the waist up :)), and barefoot people. A business owner has the absolute right to decline to do business with anyone for any reason. And to the ACLU, neither you, nor our government can dictate to me who I can and cannot sell my products to. KMA

I think as a business owner you should be able to refuse service to anyone, for any reason.

That's right. If you serve the public, you need to serve all the public and not pick and choose based on your prejudices. It's none of her business who he is marrying.

If you know someone is sinning, should you support their sin? Jesus's words would be I don't condemn you, go and sin no more. See Jesus loves the sinner and hates the sin. So, yeah he wouldn't support a crack addict or spouse abuse, serial killer, etc etc. Some Christians believe Jesus is against homosexual acts, so they try to do what he would do and not support such behavior.
